

Improving the Impact of UNDP's PVE Programmes
Designing, Monitoring and Evaluating PVE
Workshop for UNDP Country Offices in the Arab States Region
27-28 February 2019
Tunis, Tunisia

With a growing portfolio of PVE programmes, there is an increasing need to understand their impact. To sharpen and improve UNDP's diverse PVE programmes we must know what works - and what does not - in preventing violent extremism.

To assist colleagues and partners in the sometimes uncharted territory of monitoring and evaluating PVE programmes, UNDP's Regional Hub for Arab States and Peacebuilding organization International Alert have developed a toolkit and a training/support package on how to develop context specific, conflict sensitive projects, how to include data collection from the beginning, and how to assess progress with sometimes modest means. Please read more about the toolkit and the accompanying PVE Indicator Bank here.

On 27-28th February, UNDP's Regional Hub for Arab States and International Alert wish to offer a one and a half-day training on M&E for PVE, tailored to UNDP colleagues in the Arab States region. Using colleague's own projects as starting point, this clinic style training will assist in advancing M&E capacity generally as well as strengthen projects, whatever the stage of their implementation.

About the Lead Facilitator

Ruth Simpson works with International Alert as Senior Lead of Impact and Learning in the MENA region. She has over 11 years of experience in peacebuilding and conflict prevention with a particular focus on programme management, design and M&E, including on PVE programming. Ruth Simpson is co-author of the M&E for PVE toolkit.

